- New Business - membership of the APEA offers you the forum to exchange views and ideas with colleagues and fellow members and make valuable contacts within the industry

The Association's Aims and Objectives

Technical progress within our rapidly changing industry is leading to major reform of standards and codes. Such developments have enhanced the need and value of the Association to its members.

The Association was formed in 1958 and a summary of its objectives include:

- The advancement of scientific, technical and legal knowledge required in the administration of the Petroleum and Explosives Acts and associated legislation
- To facilitate the interchange of information ideas and practice on all matters pertaining to Petroleum and Explosives and associated legislation
- To attain, so far as is practicable, uniformity in the administration of this legislation
- To co-operate with other bodies having objectives similar to those of the Association, and to act as an authoritative body for consulting with government, public bodies and others in matters of public, professional and scientific interest concerning petroleum and explosives law

Branches

APEA Branches have been established across most parts of the UK and Ireland, with a growing number of European and North American members. The Association's branches serve as the forum for members. Addresses of branch secretaries are provided in each copy of the APEA's journal, The Bulletin.

Branch meetings provide the means whereby members can exchange information, knowledge and experience as well as providing a platform for speakers from members of the Association industry, government departments and elsewhere.

The Bulletin

This is the quarterly magazine, published by the Association and is sent free to all members. The Bulletin includes news, features of technical and legal interest, covering all aspects of Petroleum and Explosives.

The Bulletin provides a forum for technical, legal, safety and sometimes controversial matters.

APEA Conferences & Exhibitions

Designed for industry professionals, our comprehensive programme of technical and business conferences derive their authority from the APEA's expertise - we know the issues and the people behind them. The conferences cover topical issues in a friendly and informal atmosphere.

Training

The APEA offers training courses in all aspects of petroleum from legislation to the practical application codes during filling station construction. Courses cater for all disciplines within the industry including engineers, regulators, contractors, maintenance and suppliers. Courses are held all over the UK and are supported by experienced staff with high quality presentations.

General Information

The Association comprises Fellows, Members, Corporate Members, Honorary Members and Retired Members. The APEA is managed by the National Council which consists of Officers of the Association, four people elected from the membership and representatives from local branches.

The APEA has grown rapidly and continues to gain strength and recognition in its field of work. The National Council and Branch Secretaries act as a clearing house for day-to-day enquiries.
